Bad Blaze at Sanbornville.

Two large dwelling houses and stables were destroyed and Mrs. Jas. C. Young was seriously burned in a fire at Sanbornville Thursday of last week.

The buildings were situated on the White Mountain road and were owned by Mr. Young and Alvah H. Wiggin.

The damage was estimated at about $3000 for both sets of buildings. The Young place was insured for $1200 and the Wiggin property for one-half its value.

The fire started in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Young from an oil stove about 3:30 o'clock in the morning. The flames spread rapidly through the house and soon jumped to the barn.

Nearly 100 lbs. of furniture of the Young house was destroyed. The stables belonging to Mr. and Mrs. Wiggin were saved.

He was at the railroad offices at Concord for a long time and held the position of assistant superintendent of the Concord division. He was then appointed assistant superintendent of the Western division with headquarters in Boston, and removed to Melrose where his death occurred the first of the week. ## SENDS OUT 'CALL' TO PROGRESSIVES

Roosevelt Campaign Manager Decides Upon Aug. 5

AS DATE OF CONVENTION

Will Meet in Chicago—Issues and Platform Will Not Be Decided Until Session Takes Action.

New York—A call to the people of the United States who are in sympathy with the "national progressive movement" to send delegates to a national convention to open in Chicago Aug. 5, has been given out by United States Senator Joseph M. Dixon, Theodore Roosevelt's campaign manager. The call is signed by members of the committee chosen at the meeting held at the close of the Republican convention in Chicago, and also includes signatures of Roosevelt followers in 40 states.

"The territories have no place in a national convention and will not be considered," declared Senator Dixon, in commenting upon the signatures. "As for the missing eight states, most of them will probably send delegates, although they have not taken part in the call. Maine, for instance, postponed any definite action because of a class of men usually attend conventions."

"In all probability the convention will adopt the name 'National Progressive Party' and will have a platform. This far no issue has been authoritatively stated, and of course the platform itself will have to be decided upon by the delegates."

The call lays down no rules as to the methods of choosing delegates since each state will be expected to select its delegates by its own paraphernalia. The representation will be set down to just one-half that of the previous convention. This was considered advisable, since this convention is to be notably a deliberative body and will certainly be composed of a class of men altogether different from those who usually attend conventions.

WATER SPORTS of HONOLULU

by Bromley B. Barrettson

HONOLULU goes in for water sports to a greater extent, probably, than any other city in the world. All kinds of aquatic games are indulged in, but the most popular are also among the most dangerous and are specialized in by the natives. One of these is the Hawaiian diversion. Surf-riding is one of the most common of these water sports and is full of excitement for both participants and onlookers. In outcropped canoes the natives ride the breakwater waves as they rush shoreward, and it is almost superfluous to add, it is a sport that calls for a steady nerve and no little skill.

Riding the surf on planks is another form of this sport practiced by the visitors at Waikiki beach, and is just as exciting and dangerous. But the most exciting and dangerous of Hawaiian water sports is shark hunting. This sport is indulged in in the vicinity of Honolulu bay. Power boats of about four tons displacement are generally used. In the company of a congenial Honolulu sportsman I went out to try my hand at the game. We left the harbor at 8 o'clock in the morning, at which early hour the bay and vicinity is alive with people engaged in all kinds of fishing. Just as we started we came across a number of Japanese; some were wading up to their waists in the shallow water and others were angling from boats. Outside the bay men in two-oared canoes were hunting for sea turtles, which in these waters average from 400 to 500 pounds in weight. I watched one of the boats for a while. It moved slowly along, then suddenly stopped. An oarsman seized a rifle from the side of the boat and fired at a turtle just seen rising to the surface of the water, but it is no easy matter to hit a mark at a distance of from 50 to 60 yards from a rolling boat, and the turtle escaped. Twice after that I heard the fisherman fire, then silence followed. He had lost sight of the prey. Apparently the turtle was not very plentiful, as I saw but two during the entire day.

Arriving at the shark-hunted spot, about a mile from shore, we stopped our motor boat and prepared to try conclusions with the monster of the deep. Our bait—two fat-fish, flayed sheep—was attached to an air-tight tin buoy and thrown overboard. The hooks were attached to the buoy by ropes several yards in length. After waiting an hour and a half, during which time the traditional trade wind had wafted our little craft well out from shore, our boatman called our attention to the fact that there was a buoy. It was a buoy, and the lance the presence of the monster in the rather ruffled water was betrayed by a yellowish-green, oblong, shadow-like line just below the surface of the water. We let the creature swim about to his heart's content, and after reconnoitering for a few minutes he took courage and bit a large chunk off the sheep, using such force that part of his body actually rose above the surface. Twice, after short intervals, he again attacked the bait. Meanwhile, I had been drawing the bait nearer the boat. By this time the other sharks had appeared, but one of them seemed to have had a taste of the hook, for he writhed as if in pain and then swam away. Our young boatman, who had had considerable experience in harpooning sharks, took up a position at the covered part of the boat, harpoon in hand, ready to thrust. The shark again approached the boat and we could see his every movement quite distinctly. We gradually drew the bait almost up to the boat and the infuriated monster was now biting ravenously at the bait within easy reach of our craft. As he rose partially to the surface our man drove the harpoon into him, but not in a fatal spot, and as I thought, not with sufficient force. The harpoon merely grazed his side. Four times the boatman threw the harpoon each time missing, and finally the hungry creature gave up in disgust and relinquished its further attacks upon the bait. That it was always the same monster that made the furious attacks on the bait I was quite convinced, for I could clearly see the marks of the harpoon on his side. The behavior of the second shark, which only nuzzled the bait, and of the third was quite different.

In most countries retelling legends is not regarded as a suitable avenue of activity for an aristocratic woman whose fortune has dwindled. In Korea a lady in distress may operate a saloon upon her. And a bar is the only kind of shop she may keep with impunity. Her maid acts as barmaid, but the saloon is given space in the residence without incurring the tone of the establishment. A woman of social distinction may make shoes provided she makes such as the common people wear. To make shoes for her own class would remove her from that class.

A Korean lady in reduced circumstances may become a physician, and to protect the occupation from overcrowding the list of Korea, before the Japanese occupation, provided that no woman who was not an aristocrat might practice medicine. Powdered tiger claws, bear's gall and other remedies that do not appear in the pharmacopoeia are prescribed. But the common custom is to cure disease by making a straw image of the patient and emphasizing the seat of the affliction by making the afflicted region or member abnormally large. The manikin is thrown out of doors, and it is believed that any one who picks it up will get the disease.

Bacteriologists agree that this is sometimes the case, but they disagree with the Korean physicians as to the relief of the patient by this means. The appearance of the manikins found in the street or along the roadside is often ludicrous. When all efforts to cast off the devil fall the patient is put out of doors and left to die.

They wanted little time fooling with the bait and quickly made off. So it seems not all sharks are alike in disposition, or perhaps a difference in the degree of hunger or a half-satisfied appetite explains the contrast in conduct. Out of patience with the clumsy haste of our fishermen, we returned from our first trip empty-handed.

On the occasion of our second excursion, we started at 7 o'clock in the morning and were accompanied by an experienced fisherman and an expert harpoonist. We started under favorable auspices. The sailors on a large vessel that had been riding at anchor since the previous evening informed us that four or five sharks had been seen hovering about the vessel, on the watch for prey. For bait on this occasion we used a large joint of beef, instead of sheep. The sailors signaled to us that a shark was swimming about, now here, now there, and in less than half an hour one of the hooks had caught one of the monsters. For ten or twenty seconds the victim tugged vigorously to free himself and then remained so still that we thought it had escaped. However, with a pull to examining the bait, we began to pull in the rope, and with it came a good-sized fish. To prevent a long struggle I put a bullet into its side the moment it reached the surface of the water. All at once it stretched out and the harpoonist thrust his weapon into its flat forehead, about four to five inches from the edge of the mouth. Scarcely had we tied the prey to the side of the boat, when the men on the big steamer came to the sharks swimming all around us and certainly did not improve our sport, for some of the monsters appeared again for some time.

As my fellow fisherman had important business to transact I took him ashore during the forenoon, and returned to continue the sport. About 4 o'clock in the afternoon a courageous or very hungry shark attacked the bait four times before he met his doom. As an experiment I shot him in the belly, and the bullet had a much more decisive effect than in the case of the first fish. The length of the first fish was 6.5 feet, and that of the second 7.8 feet. The former was yellowish-green in color and the latter was striped like a tiger.

On this day the sharks took little notice of the large bait floating on the surface and were evidently looking for prey deeper down. I can find no satisfactory explanation for this as the weather conditions were practically the same on both days. It is possible that the difference in bait was responsible, as the fat, flayed sheep used on the first occasion were white in color, while that employed on the second day was dark in color and devoid of fat. The natives believe that the sight of the shark is defective, and that is the reason the monster rarely attacks the brown-skinned natives. Perhaps they are right.

Instead of making a "seasaw" Korean girls and boys lay a long board over a log or fence with one end fastened down and jump up and down on the elevated end, the impact of the weight tossing the other into the air. A long residence in Korea would be required to ascertain all of the differences in custom marking the antipodal point of view. In most countries the octopus is a dreaded sea monster and a synonym for evil. Black is not worn for mourning in Korea. White is prescribed by custom.

Singing and the Lungs.
It is well known that singing, like whistling, is a fine exercise for the lungs, and some doctors advise those who fear consumption to go in for singing for this reason.
At the same time they, of course, do not advance the claim that singing alone will save anyone from or cure consumption. Acquire the habit of taking the big deep breath, which is a primary requisite of any kind of singing, bad or good, and the physical joy derived from it will never allow you to relapse into lazy breathing.

WILLING TO SHARE PENNIES

Generous Act of Street Walf That Gained Him a Friend in Great Novelists.
Charles Dickens, the creator of many delightful child characters, was once a penniless boy during his early years. He wandered the streets of London in search of material for his books without a penny in his pocket.
One evening while doing this he was accosted by a small boy who asked him for a penny. Dickens searched his pockets, but they were empty, and so he told the boy, who was shivering in the cold.
"Poor man!" exclaimed the little fellow, "we'll go hunka together!" Dickens stood back in the shadow of the street to see what the outcome would be. The lad continued to beg, and finally gained two pennies. He came dancing to Dickens with a jolly ring in his voice.
"Now," he said, "we'll have two hot buns apiece!"
Such a generous spirit under such trying circumstances struck Dickens so forcibly that he took the lad home with him, and there he was fed and clothed, and started on the road to a better life.

Helped a Little.

At Dinard one summer there was a beautiful young countess, the wife of a millionaire, whose bathing dress was well-known.
A couple of men about town were talking in shocked tones about the countess' bathing dress on the casino terrace.
"It's shocking; it's most improper," said the first.
"But," said the second, "I can't believe it's any worse than the dinner dress she wore at Mrs. Hughes-Hall's last night."
"Oh, well," said the other, "she had her diamonds on then."—Rochester Evening Telegram.

Same Purpose Accomplished.

"Oh, George!" exclaimed a fond mother, when she saw her small boy considerably battered up and dirty, "you have been fighting again! How often have I told you that you should be a fighter!"
"Well," said he, "what are you going to do when a fellow hits you?"
"Why, keep out of his way," said the mother.
"I'll," said the youngster, "he'll keep out of mine after this."

Her Special Advantage.

Blessed Sympathy.

Sympathy with animals blesses and humanizes men and women. To get into real relations with an animal is a liberal education. It is something to be really interested even in a plant and to observe the working of life in any sphere not our own. How much more when that life is directing a personality which consciously looks up to us and will love us if we will let it!—Christian Register.

Willing to Oblige.

A story comes from a town where firms advertise to sell fish direct to small purchasers. The glowing advertisements asked for the sending of half a dollar with a list of the varieties of fish preferred. One letter read:
"I want two salmon, a dozen white fish, a dozen herring, some flounders, and if you have them you can add a lobster."

The next day the lady received a letter, which ran:

"Dear Madam: Please send another dime and we will forward the fishman."—Dallas News.

Where He Drew the Line.

An English earl, lately deceased, who had no family, was notorious for his hatred of children, and on one occasion he engaged as lodge keeper an pensioner named McKicken. Some few months later McKicken's wife presented him with a son and heir. On learning of the occurrence his lordship rode down to the lodge in a terrible rage.
"I hear," said he to Mr. McKicken, "that your wife has a son."
"Yes, my lord," said the man proudly.
"Well, now, look here, McKicken: when I put you here, it was to open and shut a gate, but by the Lord Harry, not to procreate."

Corea, A Land of Contrasts

Contrasts between the customs of Corea and those of other countries are striking everywhere. In other lands when a man wants to remove a hog from one pasture to another he drives it or tells it with corn. Not so in Corea. Here a stout laboring man catches a full grown hog, ties its feet together, puts it on a wooden frame made from the limbs of trees and carries it to market. The same wooden frame is used by the porter who carries your trunk from the station to the hotel instead of using a truck or wheelbarrow.

In other countries the tiger, the leopard and the elephant inhabit the tropics. In Corea these animals flourish in a climate as severe as that of Ontario. The fur of the Korean tiger is longer and glossier than that of his cousin in the jungles of tropical India, for the same reason that the coat of a raccoon is finer in winter than in summer when it is not needed for warmth.

The Korean tiger is a royal looking beast, seen frequently standing in a commanding position upon a snow-covered mountain side looking down disdainfully at a passing train and growling the protesting native's answer to the shriek of the invading "mogul."

Sporting Englishmen have a few shooting boxes in Corea and like to hunt elephants there because the climate is far more agreeable to them than that of Burma, Ceylon or Africa, where elephants are found.

Streets of Seoul. Ponies are ridden, but never used to draw vehicles as they are in other countries, and cattle are never killed for beef. Cows, which have been known in Corea for scores of centuries, are never milked, or were not until a few years ago, and the Koreans never knew anything about dairy products.

In most countries the horse is considered a better mount than the donkey. Not so in Corea. There the meek and slow moving ass is regarded as the best riding animal.

Forced His Way to Success

Remarkable in Many Ways Was the Career of De Martino, Famous Marine Painter.

Recently there died in England Commander Edouard de Martino, marine painter in ordinary to her majesty, the late Queen Victoria. His life was one of remarkable interest, and a signal tribute of mind over body, for he had been a paralytic for years. He was born in Naples 70 years ago, and as a lad entered the Italian navy. A violent illness brought on paralysis, depriving him of the use of his right arm and leg. Forced to leave the sea, he began his life work, which led to astonishing success. With his left hand he gained control of the brush, gradually developed a English king, long before Edward's accession to the throne, and accompanied him on many sea voyages. It was the German emperor, however, who inspired De Martino to warmest enthusiasm, for William II. and he were sworn friends and comrades, having taken many cruises together. In 1899 De Martino came to this country to witness the races between the Columbia and Shamrock II., and painted several pictures of the contest. He was a member of the Academy of Fine Arts of Rio Janeiro, in addition to having been decorated by the King of Italy.

Increasing Cow's Yield.

Experiments made in France show that by adding 4 cents' worth of peanut oil cake to a cow's winter feed her daily yield of milk can be increased by 10 to 15 cents.

Where Gold Goes.

More than a third of the new gold now produced in this country goes in to the arts and manufactures. Ten Telescoped Near Corning, N. Y.

FOG HIDES DANGER SIGNAL

Elmira and Corning Hospitals Overwhelmed When Their Way Crowded with Victims, Many of to Niagara Falls.

Corning, N. Y.—Westbound Lackawanna passenger train No. 9, from New York, composed of two engines, a baggage car, three Pullmans and two day cars, the order named, was derailed at Gibson, three miles east of Corning, at 5:25 o'clock a. m., by express train No. 11.

More than forty persons were killed and between fifty and sixty persons were injured. The wreckage of the train was a scene of horror to the visitors who had boarded the train at points along the Lackawanna line.

The wreck was the worst in the history of the road. It was, according to William Schroeder, engineer of the express, was his failure to see the signals set against his train. The morning was foggy and he said he couldn't make out the signals.

The wrecked train stood on the main track blocked by extra freight train No. 61, which had become crippled. There was no flag out, according to Schroeder. The signal which Schroeder described it was too foggy to see were just around the curve. The flying express plunged past him and crashed into the rear of No. 9, bringing death to more than two-score of its passengers.

generated into a disgusting show of

HARRIET QUILBY KILLED BY FALL

Woman Aviator and Passenger Plunge Into Bay at Boston.

AEROPLANE DROPS 1000 FEET

Circled Boston Light—Were on Last Lap of Flight and Miss Scott Was in the Air Above Them.

Boston.—Miss Harriet Quilby of New York, the first woman to operate a heavier than air machine across the English Channel and first to win a pilot's license under the rules of the Aero Club of America, and William A.
Willard of this city, manager of the third meet on the Harvard Field and father of Charles Foster Willard, the Currier field, were hurled a thousand feet into Dorchester Bay from Miss Quilby's Bleriot and instantly killed.

At once an admiring, applauding gathering of more than 5,000 people became a hysterical mass. Women screamed and men jumped from their seats to the western edge of the field, where the bodies had been seen to spit into the bay about twenty feet from the shore. They were checked by a troop of cavalry which had been assisting in the policing of the field.

The field surgeons were rushed toward the scene in automobiles. There it was thought that there might be the opportunity to do something for the unfortunate pair. They arrived to find their services useless, for on reaching the edge of the field there was no trace of the bodies.

From the Savin Hill Yacht Club a fleet of motor boats pushed out to search for the scene. They came to the spot where the bodies had seemed to vanish and then leaped overboard and dived into the four feet of water to search. A second later the two bodies floated to the surface and were borne to the shore and laid out on Squantum Head, where Dr. George F. Sheahan, the chief surgeon, and his three assistants began an immediate examination.

Both were dead, and in the opinion of the doctors they were dead before they struck the water. Miss Quilby's face bore no cuts, but blood flowed from a deep gash over Willard's eye.

There is probably no person who will ever be able to tell what caused the accident, but some are inclined to believe that the machine suddenly ran into a gust of wind that caused the nose to point downward too rapidly and that suction pulled Willard out of his passenger's seat to the rear of the operator and threw him headfirst most down through space. The action of his weight forced Miss Quilby to follow.

Others say that indications are that the tail control broke, for it suddenly pointed upward into the air, balanced almost perpendicular for a moment or two and then Willard shot out.

which he placed conveniently beside his

WIVES SAW THE DISASTER

Make Attempt to Fly to Europe, Suddenly Is Shattered When at Altitude of 1,000 Feet—Inventor's Brother One of the Victims.

Atlantic City, N. J.—With their wives looking on and 20,000 other persons too stunned by the tragedy to utter a word, five men, the commander and crew of four of the mammoth dirigible balloon Akron, were killed instantly when it exploded 1,000 feet in the air. The men were Melvin Vaniman, commander and commander of the airship; his brother, Calvin Vaniman, and George Bourillon, Walter Guest and Fred Elmer. The bodies of only two, Calvin Vaniman and Bourillon, were recovered. They were mangled beyond recognition. Those of the others are in the wreckage in Absecon Inlet, over which the explosion occurred.

Divers have seen fragments of bodies in the tangle of wires that formed the car and made for the crew a fatal trap.
There does not seem a possibility that enough of any body may be recovered to make identification certain, unless it should be through clothing that may cling to it. The airship itself was blown almost to atoms. The cause of the explosion is unknown, but it is believed to have been caused by a too sudden expansion of gas.

Mrs. Vaniman and the three other widows, Mrs. Elmer, Mrs. Bourillon and Mrs. Guest, who were sitting on the balcony of the Vaniman cottage watching the balloon when it exploded are suffering from nervous prostration and are in the care of physicians.

The explosion now is laid to the experimenting of Vaniman with a new theory in aerial navigation. Inside the great outer shell of the dirigible there was a gas bag under which were several small air chambers. It is thought Vaniman took too much air in these compartments, compressed the gas to a danger point and the rays of the sun condensing the still further caused the tearing of the outer shell and the explosion.

FOUR GIRLS DROWNED IN PIT.

Little Shoes and Stockings in a Row Marked the Spot.

Perth Amboy, N. J.—Four pairs of little shoes and stockings, found at the edge of a water filled clay pit, told the story of the drowning of four small girls in South Amboy.

On Sunday afternoon Ellen and Martha Pansoni, in company with Susan Pansoni and Frances Stanowitz, all in the neighborhood of ten years old, decided to go to the woods near Sayreville to pick berries. At 5 o'clock on Sunday night the parents of the children became alarmed at their not coming home. Accordingly a search was commenced, and all night long and until next day it was unsuccessful.

Frank Marsh and David Kramer, both of South Amboy, saw four pairs of shoes and stockings being a large clay pit on the outskirts of the city.
Being informed of the disappearance of the children, they dragged the pit and recovered the bodies.

About three hundred little girl friends attended the funeral.

TARIFF REFORM IS DEMOCRATIC CREED

Leading Plank of Platform Adopted by Baltimore Convention.

FAVORS FIGHT ON TRUSTS

Action of Republican Administration in Compromising With Standard Oil and Tobacco Combines Condemned—Views on Other Subjects.

Following are the principal planks of the platform adopted by the Democratic national convention at Baltimore.

The Tariff Reform.

"We declare it to be a fundamental principle of the Democratic party that the federal government under the Constitution has no right or power to impose or collect tariff duties except for the purpose of revenue and we demand that the collection of such taxes shall be limited to the expenditures of government honestly and economically administered.

"The high Republican tariff is the principal cause of the unequal distribution of wealth; it is a system of taxation which makes the rich richer and the poor poorer; under its operation the American farmer and laboring man are the chief sufferers; it raises the cost of the necessities of life to them, but does not protect their product or wages.

"We favor the immediate downward revision of the existing high, and in many cases, prohibitive tariff duties, insuring that material reductions be speedily made upon the necessaries of life, and the removal of competition with trust controlled products and articles of American manufacture where sold abroad more cheaply than at home could be put upon the free.

"We denounce the action of President Taft in vetoing the bills to reduce the tariff in the cotton, woolen, metals and chemicals schedules and the farmers free list bills, all of which were designed to give immediate relief to the masses from the exactions of the trusts.

"The Republican party, while promising tariff revision, has shown by its tariff legislation that such revision is not its policy; the party's interests and having been faithless to its pledges of 1908 it should no longer enjoy the confidence of the nation.

High Cost of Living.

"The high cost of living is a serious problem in every American community. The Republican party platform attempts to escape from responsibility for present conditions by denying that they are due to a protective tariff. We take issue with them on this subject and charge that excessive prices result from the high tariff laws enacted and maintained by the Republican party, and from trusts and commercial conspiracies fostered and encouraged by the policy of the Republican party. We assert that no substantial relief can be secured for the people until import duties on the necessities of life are materially reduced, and those criminal conspiracies are broken up.

Anti-Trust Law.

"A private monopoly is indefensible and intolerable. We therefore favor the rigorous enforcement of the criminal as well as the civil law against trusts and monopolies, and we demand enactment of such additional legislation as may be necessary to make it impossible for a private monopoly to exist in the United States.

"We condemn the action of the Republican administration in compromising with the Standard Oil Company and the tobacco trust and its failure to invoke the criminal provisions of the anti-trust law against the officers of those corporations after they had declared their policy of the undisputed facts in the record they had violated the criminal provisions of the law.

"We regret that Sherman anti-trust law has been a judicial construction depriving it of its force and effect.

This department should be main-there should be a modification of the

It also recommends a department of publicity before the election of sampling contributions—a measure demanded in our national platform of 1908 and at that time opposed by the Republican party, and we commend the Democratic House of Representatives for extending the doctrine of publicity to recommendations, verbal and written, upon which presidential appointments are made, to the ownership and control of newspapers and to the expenditures made by and in behalf of those who aspire to presidential nominations and we point to additional justification for this legislation to the enormous expenditures of money in behalf of the president and his predecessor in the recent contest with the Republican nomination for president.

Presidential Primaries.

"The movement towards more popular government should be promoted through legislation in each state which will permit the expression of the preference of the electors for national candidates at presidential primaries.

"We direct that the national committee incorporate in the call for the next nominating convention a requirement that all expressions of preference for presidential candidates shall be given and the selection of delegates and alternates be through a primary election conducted by the party or property in each state where such expression and election are not provided for by state law.

Term of President.

"We favor a single presidential term, and to the end urge the adoption of an amendment to the constitution making the president of the United States ineligible to re-election, and we pledge the candidate of this convention to this principle.

Railroads, Express Companies, Telegraph and Telephone Lines.

"We favor the efficient supervision and rate regulation of railroads, express companies, telegraph and telephone lines engaged in interstate commerce. To this end we recommend the valuation of railroads, express companies, telegraph and telephone lines by the interstate commerce commission, such valuation to take into consideration the physical value of the property, the original cost, the cost of reproduction, and any element of value that will render the valuation fair and just.

Banking Legislation.

of the country will be largely freed from panics and consequent unemployment and business depression by such a sys-
